We see it stated in the Eastern papers that it was intended to have a grand reunion this year of the Union and Confederate officers and men who were engaged in the battle of Gettysburg; but, owing to the enterprise being started too late to perfect all necessary arrangements, it was deferred until next year, when it is hoped to have a grand affair of it. Those are the kind of reunions to be encouraged, where the old belligerents can again meet in fraternal fellowship, after all bitterness has passed away; and if there is any left, thus meeting together will soon dissipate it.

We hope the next reunion at Pilot Knob will be such a one as will secure the attendance of the officers and men of both the Union and Confederate armies, and then a grand time can be had.

The children of the late Gen. Hood are exceedingly well placed. The eldest twin girls, 12 years of age, are being educated in Germany by Mr. John A. Morris, of Winchester, N. Y.; John Bell, the eldest boy, aged 10, has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Russell, of Mississippi; Duncan Norbert, aged 9, is now at school at Saratoga, where his expenses are defrayed by Miss Furniss, a wealthy lady of New York; Lillian and Marian, twin girls of 8 years, are the adopted children of Mr. Thatcher Adams and wife, of New York city; Odile and Ida, aged 6, also twins, have been taken by Mr. and Mrs. McGee, of Woodville, Miss.; and Oswald, a boy of nearly 5 years, has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Harney, of New York. Anna Gertrude, the youngest, who had been taken by a Georgia lady, died two years since from teething, aged 1 year. All those who have adopted these children are themselves childless, save only Mr. and Mrs. Morris.

A prominent German brewer of Cincinnati said to a New York Sun correspondent the night before the election in Ohio: "We do not regard this as a temperance fight at all. The German saloon keepers of Cincinnati are perfectly willing to pay a license on their traffic, and to close up on Sunday. They want, however, a Sunday law that will protect them in closing, and not allow somebody else to sell through back doors while we do not sell at all. What the Germans do object to is the manner in which Charley Foster and Deacon Richard Smith are inclined to treat us. They will take occasion tomorrow to resent Charley Foster's statement classing the Germans of Ohio with thieves and harlots. We propose to show them, if possible, that the Germans are as much law-abiding citizens as anybody else. I, for one, do not like to vote the Democratic ticket, but I shall do so tomorrow, and my employees will do the same."

The Chicago Times thinks the frequency with which a certain class of juveniles on the North Side in that city are being implicated in robberies and burglaries, suggests that the Sunday-school teacher has lost his grip, or the class referred to was kept out of the reach of the gospel. What makes it think so is because a few weeks ago a 10-year-old girl was taken to the Chicago Avenue station who had stolen over $1,000 worth of clothing and trinkets from the fashionable section of that division, and a few nights after two boys were taken in who had burglarized stores, saloons and barns of goods, cigars, horses and wagons; and because, more recently, a gang of these archbishops pitched upon a man on West Huron street and slashed him in the back with a knife, from the effects of which he will never fully recover; and because (worst of all) a girl 10 years old was arrested last Saturday for stealing a bag of oats and disposing of them to some junk dealers.

Further evidence that the South enjoys a large measure of prosperity is furnished by prominent New York merchants, who were lately interviewed by a Tribune reporter. A dry goods man said:

"The effect of the good crops at the South on trade has been very perceptible. In that section the people are rejoicing in a greater diversity of crops than they have had before; their grain crops are excellent and there is promise of a good cotton crop. Consequently the Southern merchants are fast getting into an improved condition."

A wholesale merchant said:

"There is no grumbling this year on the part of merchants from the South; they are all hopeful and cheerful. They have had the best grain crops they ever had and the cotton crop promises well."

The merchants of other cities in the South who have dealings with that great and growing section bear the same testimony. Better than all, the Southern papers teem with facts which confirm the most glowing reports of the fine condition of the South.

Poetic Justice.

We cannot sympathize with our Republican friends, who are apparently so agitated by the methods of fraud and Filley, or Filley and fraud. We cannot sympathize with them in their sudden last-hour outcry against low methods or "hoodlumism" in politics. They may be perfectly right in many of their complaints about boss rule and mismanagement of their party in this State. Yet they are not entitled to any sympathy.

They are earning what they deserve. They are only fighting their own creation. The evil harvest that now shocks them is the product of their own plodding and ploughing.

If the methods of Filley in the local management of the Republican party are so bad as to justify this revolt of the self-styled "moral" sentiment, what were the methods to which this same "moral" element of the party not only submitted, but which it eagerly approved in the Republican party of the nation during the rule of Grant, Hayes and Company?

What is the packing of a primary compared with the packing of the Supreme Court of the United States? Yet Grant did it and we never heard these honorable Republican reformers object or protest.

What is the perjury of a small letter-carrier compared with the monstrous wholesale perjury of Presidential electors, Returning Boards, Electoral Commissions, United States Senators and United States Supreme Judges?

What is the personal interference of one individual, now out of office, and without any power of patronage whatever, compared with the despotic interference of Grant in State Government by gunboats and bayonets?

What is the theft of a precinct compared with the theft of the Presidency?

Yet these highly honorable reformers, who are now so shocked because Filley does not respect anything but success, submitted, applauded, enjoyed and hailed with enthusiasm political or partisan successes that were a million times worse—that were the result of force, fraud, bribery, perjury, wholesale corruption and the monstrous violation of the Constitution!

Chickens come home to roost. If Filley is master of the machine, and master of machine methods, it is due to these very reformers who for many years past supported this same Filley and his machine, no matter how low, disreputable or outrageous, as long as it seemed to lead to Republican success.

A Millionaire's Motto.

Mr. William H. Vanderbilt is making a trip to the West to see the country and the railroads. He arrived at Chicago on Sunday afternoon. A correspondent of the New York Times had an interview with him there. The talk related to the rich man's railroad interests, and in the course of conversation the reporter asked Mr. Vanderbilt whether his limited expressed did not pay.

No, not a bit of it," was the response. "We only run it because we are forced to do so by the action of the Pennsylvania road. It does not pay expenses. We would abandon it if it was not for our competitor keeping its train on."

"But don't you run it for the public benefit?" asked the guileless correspondent.

"The public be damned!" said Mr. Vanderbilt. "What does the public care for the railroads, except to get as much out of them for as small a consideration as possible? I don't take any stock in this silly nonsense about working for anybody's good but our own, because we are not."

Here we have the true sentiments of the heart. The public be damned! This is what William H. Vanderbilt says to the people of the United States. How do they like it?

Through the exercise of the right of eminent domain the public have established the great railroads in which his millions are so profitably invested. Through the legislative power the public have created the corporations which enable individuals to own and use vast properties in association with others without incurring the excessive liabilities of partners. The public protect this man daily, hourly, indeed throughout every minute of his existence, in life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and yet, forsooth, he feels himself superior to mankind that he contemptuously exclaims, "The public be damned!"

Let him put this motto on the outside of the palace car in which he is dashing through the country with his hilarious party of festive friends. Let him blazon it on his carriage. Let him write it across the famous imitation Florentine doors of his costly residence on the Fifth Avenue. Let him inscribe it in plain view high on the walls of the Grand Central Depot in this city, so that men, women, and children may see what William H. Vanderbilt said last Sunday: "The public be damned!"

Underneath it might be placed another remark of his uttered on the occasion: "Railroads are not run on sentiment, but on business principles, and to pay." To illustrate the business principles, there should be a reference to the Spuyten Duyvil disaster and the tunnel collision, followed by the words "More to come!"

Everybody knows that the old Commodore hesitated long and anxiously before he decided to give his money to William H. Vanderbilt. Nobody can wonder at it now.—New York Sun.
